SUGAR MAY GO TO TEN CENTS

Granulated Sugar Advances Another Half Cent with Eight Cents a Pound and Possibly Ten Prophesied for the Near Future.

The rise in price of granulated sugar to eight cents, predicted in these columns some days ago, is almost at hand, the necessary article now selling at seven and a half cents in town while the eight cent price is expected by the end of the week. In some of the county towns that figure has already been reached while some town merchants are saying that granulated sugar will reach even ten cents within a few months.

The high price of sugar coming just at the time when housewives are putting up fruits for the winter months will work a hardship upon many and it is to be regretted that the rise has been forced upon the retailers just at this time.

The unprecedented high prices, according to Robert D. McCurdy, who represents the Franklin Sugar Refinery of Philadelphia, are not due, as the dispatches have stated, to a "gentlemen's agreement between independents and the trusts," but to actual crop conditions.

"The trust hasn't any more to do with the price than I have," said Mr. McCurdy. "There is no 'gentlemen's agreement,' a fact which may be verified by a glance at the quotations which show that the independents are today charging more for sugar than the so-called trust.

"It is because of a record breaking drought in the beet-sugar regions in Germany and Russia, which are really the sources of the world's supply, that prices have taken their skyward course. The rainfall there has been two thirds below normal, and the crop will be 30 per cent. short. Instead of exporting sugar to this country Europe will not have sufficient for her own consumption and will have to call on Cuba and Louisiana for assistance. If we want sugar, we will have to pay for it." Brokers and refiners are waiting at present for the crop reports from Louisiana and Cuba. If there are bumper crops there, the price will not be as high as it would be if the crop should be only average or below average. These conditions will not be definitely known until December 1.

According to the reports which have been secured by the government experts from the department of agriculture, Washington, the United States is facing the most serious sugar famine in years. The sugar experts have gotten field reports from all sugar growing sections of this country and reports on the conditions of the market and estimates in the amount of sugar held in stock by the refiners.

It was found the refiners have practically no stock on hand: there has been almost no trading in anything but seconds on the New York markets for weeks; the refiners find it impossible to obtain any more of the big European surplus they counted on and the fall crop for the United States threatens to show a serious diminution under previous years.

PEN MAR BIRTHDAY

Tuesday was everybody's day at Pen Mar, and everybody was there. It was the 36th anniversary of the park and over 8,000 people turned out and helped to make the birthday party a success. Special added attractions were arranged and all who were fortunate enough to be present expressed with words of satisfaction and approval their appreciation of the attention and interest which the railroad company afforded all. The celebration was a great success and the Western Maryland Railroad is to be congratulated on its efforts which were of the highest order and enjoyed by all.

During the afternoon Japanese balloons and daylight aerial fireworks were displayed and at night other pyrotechnical displays were exhibited. The fireworks were of a high order and much enjoyed.

GRADUATING CLASS

Sunday School Teachers' Training Class of Flohr's Lutheran Church and Cashtown Reformed Church will hold graduating exercises in the Church at Cashtown on Saturday evening, September 16th, at 7.30 o'clock.

LATE CROPS GOOD

"The late crops of corn, hay and potatoes are developing to a remarkable extent," said Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Martin. "No one had any idea, even ten days ago, that they would be so good as they are going to be. Each day brings new reports which are better than those of the previous day."

Deputy Secretary Martin says that even when sunshine succeeded the copious rains of August those versed in agriculture did not expect the late crops would be benefited to the extent which the passing days have shown. But vegetables jumped as in the early spring and the countryman is reaping the benefit.

"We have no statistics," concluded Mr. Martin, "to show just what the past four weeks have accomplished, but when they are made up they will be highly interesting reading."

RUBE WINS

Routrician, Jr., the horse formerly owned by Dr. H. M. Hartman under the name of "Rube" won first money at the Middletown fair on Wednesday.

SAYS HE WILL NEVER RETURN

Defendant who Gave Officers a Chase Says this is his Last Trip here. Baltimore Large Enough for Young Train Rider.

The trio of train riders who gave local officers such merry chases on Tuesday were given hearings before Squire Harnish and all pleaded guilty, a sentence of ten days being imposed in each instance. The men gave their names as Daniel McCarthy, Leo Kelly and John Smith. Smith is the colored man whose rapid travels through Reynold's woods threatened to secure his escape.

McCarthy is a boy of about nineteen years and claimed he left Baltimore Saturday night, walking and riding from there to Hagerstown. Failing to get work there he started for home again, but came through here with the arrest by Deputy Sheriff Fissel and Mervie Sheeler as a result. When Charles B. Wilson told him at the hearing that any further offenses of the kind in this section would be dealt with severely the boy replied,

"After this the electric cars will be good enough for me. It took me two days to get here and it will take twelve to get home. You'll never see me here again. Baltimore is big enough for me."

John Bail, the Hampton man who is charged with beating a bill for dinner at the Evans' restaurant and later with making trouble for Officers Stroup, was given Squire Hill Tuesday a hearing before evening and held for Court.

McCUTCHEON'S BEVERLY

A. G. Delamater and William Norris Inc., will present their original Studebaker Theatre Chicago production of George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly," a dramatization of Mr. McCutcheon's most successful and popular novel, "Beverly of Graustark" by Robert M. Baker at the Wizard Theatre on Saturday night. As each of the characters introduced in the novel appear in the play, a large and expensive cast as well as an exceptionally heavy scenic production is required for its proper presentation, and as the company appearing here have been engaged for the express purpose of playing an extended engagement at a leading Broadway theatre, no expense has been spared either as to cast or scenic equipment.

SCARLET FEVER CAUSES STAMPEDE

Real Scare on the Mountain. Health Officers Take a Hand. Reports of Mistaken Case were Apparently in Error.

The story of scarlet fever at Monterey Inn seems to be more of a fact than would seem to be indicated by reports from that section.

The Pennsylvania State Health Department is in constant touch by telephone with Dr. H. X. Bonbrake, county medical inspector of Franklin county who is making a thorough and painstaking investigation of the scarlet fever scare at Monterey Inn, Monterey, Pa. His latest report was to the effect that Mrs. Robinson, the scarlet fever patient who fled from the inn and caused a stampede among the guests, has been located in Baltimore where she is quarantined.

Unable to stop the stampede of hotel guests early Saturday morning, Dr. Young, the Monterey physician who attended Mrs. Robinson, had to stand by and see the frightened guests fleeing from the place. Monterey is a small resort on the Pennsylvania side of the state line and the inn is run on the same lines as a summer country home.

Mrs. Robinson developed symptoms of the disease last Friday and against the advice of her attending physician, and before his report reached the state health authorities, the patient left, taking the 7.16 a. m. train Saturday.

At first the state medical men, not knowing on which side of the state line the place was situated, were at a loss what action to take. This difficulty was soon righted, however, and Health Officer Snowberger, of Waynesboro, was ordered to the scene. While he was en route Mrs. Robinson fled and so did the guests.

The hotel, or inn, has been disinfected and so has the train on the Western Maryland railway which carried the patient to Baltimore. It is understood that most of the guests were residents of Baltimore and that they have been traced to their homes.

The State Health Department does not expect any serious outbreak either here or in Maryland.

ARGUMENT POSTPONED

William Reed, who was found guilty of murder in the first degree, for the killing of Mrs Sara Mathna, will not be sentenced for at least fifteen days.

Attorney Elder presented a motion asking that the notes and charge of the court in the recent trial be written out before the reasons for a new trial be filed. The court ordered the court reporter to prepare the notes for the attorneys and extended the time for hearing defendant's counsel from four to fifteen days.

The inability to have the notes and charge prepared at an early date is due to the fact that a busy session of Franklin County common pleas court is now on, and will take the greater part of the week.

The case will now come before the court about September 26.

COLT IN FORKS OF TREE

A colt belonging to Charles E. Martin, on the Leimsburg turnpike, occupied a precarious seat almost an entire day.

The young animal, while in a pasture field and probably leaping about in a playful way, threw its front legs through the forks of a tree and then followed with its body until it was half way across, when it stuck fast.

In that position it remained from morning to early evening, when Mr. Martin learned of the colt's predicament. He was compelled to cut down the tree to release the animal. Fortunately the colt was not much hurt.

The groom is in the engineering service of the state, and after a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Flynn go to their home which is as yet undecided.

LEREW—BUSHEY

At the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bushey, of Latimore township, Tuesday noon was solemnized the marriage of their daughter, Alice Bella to Parker Althouse Lerew.

Rev. Paul Gladfelter pronounced the ceremony. After the wedding dinner was served to the assembled company. Only the immediate families of the bride and groom were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Lerew left the same afternoon for a wedding trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

The bride and groom are two well known and popular young people of Latimore township with a large circle of friends who join in extending congratulations and best wishes.

FRUIT DEALER FORFEITS $1000

Lancelot Jacques, Smithsburg, recently sold to a Newark, N. J., man, for $1 per basket, the peaches in his large orchard, near Pondsville, Md. He expected a crop of 17,000 baskets. The buyer put up $1000 as a guarantee that he would take the crop. When prices began to tumble in the city market, the Newark man decided not to buy the crop, so he forfeited the $1000.

Mr. Jacques is now picking and shipping the crop himself.

CHURCHES MUST PAY TAX

Nearly every church in Carlisle received a donation amounting from $2,500 to $5,000 from the estate of the late Mrs. Sarah A. Todd, of that place, and now these churches will have to pay the state collateral inheritance tax on the sums they received. In several instances the tax will amount to $250 and the Cumberland county court decided it will have to be paid. There is a movement for combining to resist the payment, and take an appeal in the action to the state courts. Among the churches to benefit by the generosity of Mrs. Todd are the First Presbyterian, Second Presbyterian, First Lutheran, St. Paul's Lutheran, Allison Methodist, Evangelical, First Reformed and St. John's Episcopal.

ESTELLA MAY BUSHEY

COLLEGE OPENING BREAKS RECORDS

Largest Enrollment in History of the Institution at Opening of Gettysburg College. New Professors, New Courses.

With the largest enrollment in the history of the institution Gettysburg College opened its seventy ninth academic year Wednesday. Brua Chapel was almost entirely filled with students and alumni and the formal opening was in every way most auspicious.

The addition of the courses in municipal and civil engineering became effective with the opening of the college, Prof. Richard S. Kirby the head of the department having issued the first announcement for that work. This marks an entirely new departure in the work of the college and, in fact, of the Lutheran colleges of the country as Gettysburg is the first to adopt such courses.

Prof. Kirby was present at the morning exercises as was also Prof. Benjamin F. Schappie, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania and Dickinson College, who will occupy the French professorship.

Inspiring singing and an address by President Granville were the special features of the opening. Dr. H. W McKnight president emeritus, read the Scripture, and Dr. Wagner, of Hazleton, offered prayer.

With the opening of college all the regular activities at the institution have been taken up. Foot ball is occupying the attention of practically the entire school. Social affairs are numerous the first days of the term, a number of dances, smokers and receptions being announced for the week. Actual class room work starts Thursday and all the various activities will be in operation within a few days.

SAME PAIR IN THREE ROBBERIES

Suspicions are that Pen Mar, Bittingers, and Charmian Operators are the Same. Musician Shuns Held-up Publicity.

The series of hold-ups and other operations in this vicinity during the last ten days in which two men have always been the active parties leads officers to believe that the same team has been operating in every instance.

Last week two men stole a hand car and worked between Highfield and Fairfield entering a store at Charmian and being frightened away from the warehouse at Fairfield. Friday night a hold-up at Pen Mar was reported and Saturday night John Richrode was held up at Bittinger by a pair of highwaymen. The fact that all three have occurred in such rapid succession and always by two men seems to point to the same operators in each instance.

Mrs. David S. Melamet, Baltimore, received letters from both her husband and son, Karl, who were held up by two highwaymen within 100 yards of the Blue Mountain House, Pen Mar, Friday night. They wrote that they were none the worse for their encounter and had retired to the seclusion of a cottage near Pen Mar. Mr. Melamet wrote as follows:

"The notoriety caused by my recent experience has been exceedingly unpleasant to me; so unpleasant, in fact, that I was forced to leave the Blue Mountain House where I was incessantly besieged with questions. It seemed as if everyone I met wanted to know just how it happened, and I had to go over the same story repeatedly.

"As I came here to the mountain for rest and recreation, the publicity of the past few days has been anything but enjoyable."

PEACH CROP FAR BELOW USUAL SIZE

Peach growers in the Quincy and Mont Alto region are now shipping their fruit to the eastern markets. The quantity is not as large as usual owing to the fact that the old peach trees are not bearing well this year.

A. E. Bradley, representing a Philadelphia commission house, has just completed the purchase of the crops of B. R. Summer, Henry Baker, Calvin Farmer and Aaron Rock, all of the Quincy region. Mr. Summer's crop is about 1 00 baskets. His trees are old. The other three owners have somewhat more than 6000 baskets. Their trees are young.

D. M. Werts the largest peach grower in all this section, will have about ten carloads of peaches this year, as against from seventy to ninety in recent years. His apple crop, however, will be of very large size.

MRS. JACOB H. SHEAFFER

After a protracted illness with dropsy and heart failure, Mrs. Amanda Sheaffer, wife of Jacob H. Sheaffer, of Hanover, died at 5.30 p. m., Tuesday, September 12, aged 38 years, 11 months and 10 days.

Mrs. Sheaffer was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Shearer, late of Glenville, and besides her husband, is survived by five brothers and four sisters, as follows: William Shearer, of Railroad, York county; James and Noah, of Summit; George, of near Abbottstown, and Adam Shearer, and Mrs. Ella Newcomer, of York; and Mrs. Millie Shue, of Glenville.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Folding Wall Rack For Drying Clothes.

CLOTHES RACK.

During the winter months the housewife often finds it very difficult to dry the wash during inclement weather. This problem can be easily solved by constructing a folding wall rack, as shown in illustration.

A square form is built of two inch wide lumber. This should be the length you wish the rack and about eighteen inches wide. It is built to hang against the kitchen wall, where it can be securely fastened with screws at the height desired. Now cut twelve pieces one inch square and seventeen inches long and four pieces one inch square and nine and one-half inches long. Bore one-half inch holes in each end of these four pieces about three-fourths inch from the end. Bore three holes of the same diameter in each one of the seventeen inch strips, placing one hole at each end and one in the center of each strip.

The rack is assembled by using round sticks of wood one-half inch in diameter. As these serve to hold the folding strips together and also to hang the clothes upon, they must be the length of the entire rack. The manner of assembling is exhibited in the illustration, which shows the drier partly opened. By simply drawing out horizontally it can be extended to hold the entire wash and when not in use can be pushed back against the wall entirely out of the way.

How to Boil Rice.

When properly boiled rice should be snowy white, perfectly dry and smooth and every grain separate and distinct. To attain this end put a quart of water on the fire and let it boil well, with a teaspoonful of salt. Wash a cupful of rice well in cold water. When the water commences to boil well add the rice. Stir occasionally and gently with a wooden spoon. The boiling water will toss the grains of rice and prevent them from clinging together. As soon as the grains commence to soften do not under any circumstances stir or touch the rice again. Let it continue to boil rapidly for about twenty minutes or until the grains begin to swell out and it appears to thicken This is easily ascertained by touching one of the grains with your finger When it has reached this stage take the cover off and pour off the water and set the pot in the oven so that the rice may swell up. Let it stand in the oven about ten minutes. Do not let it brown, but simply dry—that is, let the water which rises dry out of the rice Take it off and let it stand a few minutes. Then pour out into a dish. Every grain will be white and beautiful and stand apart, because the drying in the oven will have evaporated the moisture, leaving the rice soft, snowy white and perfectly dry.

A Sunday in Glasgow.

Hoffmann, the famous German chemist, once related an experience he had of Scotch Sabbatarianism. In 1860 he visited Glasgow, arriving in the town late on a Saturday night. The following morning he went to call on Sir William Thompson, afterward Lord Kelvin. The doorbell was answered by a parlor maid, of whom Hoffman asked if Sir William were at home. "Sir, he most certainly is not," answered the servant.

"Could you tell me where I might find him?" asked the professor.

"You will find him in church, sir," was the crushing reply, "where you ought to be."

Escaloped Crackers.

Butter a baking dish and put in it a layer of crackers, then a layer of thinly sliced cheese, add a little salt and bits of butter, repeat until dish is full, cover with milk and bake in a fairly hot oven for an hour. If cheese is mild use a generous quantity.

To Banish Fleas.

TRAIN KILLS EXCURSIONIST

Negro Excursionist Lying on Railroad Tracks in Gettysburg is Run Over by Train Sustaining Injuries from which Death Resulted.

Lying in a drunken stupor on the tracks of the Western Maryland Railroad immediately west of Washington street, James Robison, one of the colored excursionists from Baltimore who spent Monday here, was struck by a freight train about nine o'clock in the evening and had both legs severed above the knees, dying in Baltimore next morning from his injuries.

Robison had been brought to town early in the evening by Motorman Shields who found him drunk between town and the Peach Orchard. From the Square the man evidently wandered to the ill fated spot and there lay down to his fatal sleep.

Conductor Sarbaugh, of the west bound freight, was sitting on the pilot when he saw the prostrate form lying on the track but the train was almost upon the man and it was too late to prevent the fatal accident. The engine and several cars went over Robison His one leg was completely severed and the other hung by but a few threads of flesh. The train crew, assisted by Joseph Zincand, who happened to be there at the time, got the man from under the cars and Martin McSherry and Harry Lackner carried him on a stretcher to the Western Maryland baggage room. The injured man either displayed remarkable nerve or was benumbed by the whiskey for he talked calmly and apparently suffered little.

At the station Dr. H. M. Hartman, the company physician, gave attention to Robison He was assisted by J. McCrea Dickson and Maurice S Weaver, medical students, and they prepared him to be taken on the special to Baltimore which had been brought to convey a hundred or more negroes who could not be taken on the regular excursion trains. Dr. Hartman accompanied the injured man to Baltimore.

The man lived through the trip and part of the night but died in St. Joseph's hospital at three o'clock this morning. He was twenty seven years old and unmarried. His home was on Foster street.

The accident took place within a stone's throw of the spot where Charles Adams, a Philadelphia and Reading brakeman, suffered fatal injuries several months ago when a box car ran over both of his legs

PART OF FOOT CUT OFF

A distressing accident occurred at the Western Maryland station Monday evening when Andrew Bivans, the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Bivans, colored excursionists, was swung under a passenger car and had one of his feet crushed from the toes to the instep.

The father who was evidently under the influence of liquor had the child in one arm and some bundles in the other when he attempted to board a moving car though warned by many who were standing there not to try it. The man was swung down by the impact of the car and the child's foot went under the wheel. The little boy was only saved from going under the car by Pius Krout who caught him.

He was taken to the office of Dr. H. M. Hartman who gave preliminary attention and the child was later taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Baltimore, where the foot was amputated above the ankle.

The little boy bore up bravely under his sufferings but his parents exhibited great distress over the occurrence.

PRIVATE RESERVOIR

The excavation for the pipe line from Glatfelter's springs in the Pigeon hills, to W. L. Glatfelter's new residence, being erected southwest of Spring Grove, is now completed. The distance from the Glatfelter reservoir to his residence is about three and a half miles, which was excavated in a period of four months. The laying of the water pipes has now begun and it is thought that it can be completed in two weeks' time. The three inch pipes are made of a substantial pine wood, and the 50,000 gallon reservoir was finished August 26. The dimensions are 50 feet long by 12 feet deep and 12 feet wide. The reservoir is made of cement.

AFRAID OF SCARLET FEVER, GUESTS LEAVE

As the result of a false report that there was a case of scarlet fever in a cottage near Monterey Inn, on the mountain, seventy three guests left that hostelry, Saturday, for their homes in Baltimore and various other eastern cities.

A little girl of five or six years was unconsciously the cause of this trouble She became sick and the physician hesitated at first in giving the nature of the illness. Later it proved to be only a mild form of fever.

REED GUILTY; FIRST DEGREE

Slayer of Mrs. Mathna at Mont Alto Forestry School is Found Guilty of First Degree Murder by Jury out for Many Hours.

The case of William Reed, charged with killing Sadie Mathna, at Mont Alto, was given to a jury at Chambersburg at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The jury returned a verdict, at 8.52 Sunday night, of murder in the first degree.

The counsel for Reed based the case on his condition at the time of the shooting and asked for a verdict of murder in the second degree. At every session of court, the room had been packed to overflowing.

Counsel for Reed were granted four days within which to file papers for a new trial. When the bell in the court house rang people ran from every direction toward the court house.

When the clerk asked the jury had they agreed upon a verdict there was a hush in the court As the verdict, ''Guilty of murder in the first degree'' was announced, the prisoner showed considerable emotion. All during the trial and his confinement in jail, Reed at no time showed the least bit of nervousness and has been one of the most cheerful prisoners in the Franklin county jail

Reed's plea was that he did not intend to kill his victim but only to frighten her. His story of the affair was that he had gone to see her to get some pictures and papers of his which she took from his trunk. She would not give them to him, would promise them but would put him off. He only wanted some small pictures and some letters. The large picture he gave her.

That morning he rapped at the kitchen door, went in and spoke to her and she said ''good morning.'' He said he had come for those pictures and papers she had. He wanted them as he intended leaving her and going away. She would not give them to him and seemed cross, talked loud. Finally she jumped up and said ''Well I'll get them.'' She went upstairs and got them and taking the smaller articles she walked as if she were going to the window to look at them but instead she threw them into the range and burned them up He thought it was his army discharge, some letters and pictures which she burned.

Reed was standing by the table. Margaret Bricker walked in, spoke and went out.

Reed then stepped toward Sarah and said he would not stop much to slap her for throwing those things in the stove.

She raised up the coffee mill and said she would knock his head off.

Without taking a step Reed said he pulled the pistol from his pocket and fired, not intending to hit her but to scare her. She turned and ran from the room. He did not intend to hurt her at all, never thought to do more than scare her.

His victim died soon after the firing of the fatal shots. Reed had been drinking for some days.

SURPRISE PARTY

A very enjoyable surprise party was given in honor of Pius Krout Wednesday evening at his home on York street. ORCHARD DEMONSTRATIONS

State Economic Zoologist Surface has announced ninety two meetings in as many different orchards, as the fall series of public demonstrations. Every county in the state is represented.

Three series of these meetings in model orchards are held each year: two are in the spring for treatment to prevent and kill San Jose scale and the codling moth, and the third is in the fall to study the work.

Most counties will have only one of the meetings, all of which will be held next week. Cumberland and Dauphin are each favored with two, however

The Adams County demonstration will be in the orchard of George Oyler, Arendtsville, September 20.

SAVED HORSES FROM CRUELTY

Felix Feller, Local Agent for Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Sends Tired Horses to Stables. Arrests Offender.

Felix Feller local agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, rendered a valuable service on Monday when he saw that eight over driven horses were taken to the stables. David Fleishman, one driver who, it is alleged, refused to take in a horse when ordered to do so was arrested by Mr. Feller and gave bail for a hearing before Squire Hernish on Tuesday. He appeared but the case was continued until Wednesday.

Knowing from past experience that many horses would likely be worked excessively on the day of the big colored excursion Mr. Feller engaged Dr. M. Moriarty to examine every team that came up Baltimore Hill after four o'clock in the afternoon. He found eight horses in distress and they were ordered to stables, the drivers in every instance but the one obeying.

The Fleishman boy was driving a team of Reuben Fissel and Mr. Feller says one of the horses was lying over against the tongue of the wagon, scarcely able to make the top of the hill. When told that the animal would have to be taken in, it is alleged, young Fleishman refused and said he would make one more trip to Round Top.

Mr. Feller placed the boy under arrest at the Square and saw that the team was sent to the stable.

TEACHERS' MEETING

The teachers of Mt. Pleasant township held their first educational meeting at White Hall September 7th. The following teachers were present: Messrs. Stock, Rudisill, Sanders, Sponseller, Tawney, Misses Jacobs, Kinneman, Lossman, and Saddler. The school gave a short entertainment consisting of songs, recitations and solos after which the topic of "Reading" was discussed by Messrs. Sanders, Sponseller, Rudisill, Tawney and Miss Kleneman. Hon. A. H. Parr also took part. The second topic was "Why do so many of the pupils leave the public schools before they graduate and how can we induce them to remain" Messrs. Rudisill, Towney, Sponseller, Sanders and Miss Saddler took part in the discussion.

The next meeting will be held at Mt. Fairview September 21 and at Mt. Superior October 5.

NEIGHBORS' TROUBLES

Mrs. Jacob Darr was arrested by Chief Shealer on Tuesday charged by Mrs. Grace Davis with beating her daughter, Leila Davis. From the testimony given at a hearing before Squire Harnish it appeared that Wall street, the home of the parties, has been the scene of several unpleasant scenes in which the defendant figured. The case was settled by Mrs. Darr paying costs of $4.55 and agreeing to discontinue interfering with her neighbors.

DAVID PLANK HURT

The following from an Altoona paper will be of interest to many of our readers: "David C. Plank, of 108 Fifteenth street, who is employed by Frank Bront in his planing mill, yesterday afternoon got his left hand under the planer and had his left third finger partially severed. He went to the office of Dr. Davis Hogue, after which Dr. John Hogue was called into consultation and the finger amputated. The other fingers although badly cut will be saved."

SOLD 150,000 POST CARDS

Since the opening of Pen Mar June 20, H. H. Myers, proprietor of the Pen Mar store and owner of the Imperial Hotel, has disposed of 150,000 post cards to patrons at his store and aside from this there are at least two dozen other persons that had them on sale, one of the largest dealers in them being Jason Orout, proprietor of the Pen Mar hotel, who also conducts the souvenir stand near the dancing pavilion.

ARRESTED THREE

Chief Shealer, after a chase through Reynolds' woods, captured a negro Tuesday and placed him in jail. No formal charge has as yet been preferred. Deputy Sheriff George Fissel and Mervin Shealer captured two men in the east end of town who are held as suspects in the Pen Mar hold-up case, note of which has been made in these columns.

HOLD-UP MEN GET ONLY 25 CENTS

Two Men Held up Another at Bittinger and Covered Him with Revolvers when he Showed Fight. A Quarter all the Booty.

John Rickrode, a well known resident of Bittinger, was the victim of a "hold up" on Saturday night, near that place, but owing to the fact that he had but little coin in his pockets, the highwaymen were only slightly repaid for their trouble.

Mr. Rickrode was walking along the track of the Western Maryland Railroad, returning to his home between 10 and 11 o'clock. When opposite Lime Rock, near Bittinger, two men, with hats pulled down over their faces, stepped in front of him. Rickrode asked what they wanted. One of them replied: "Money!"

At this juncture Rickrode reached down for a stone, but instantly two revolvers were flashed in his face. When commanded to disgorge, Rickrode pulled six cents in change from one pocket and a quarter from the other. One of the men seized the 25 cent piece and departed—allowing Rickrode to "keep the change."

Mr. Rickrode describes the man as of medium height, but owing to the darkness, the night being cloudy, and the moon not being up, he was unable to further identify them.

HAS WOLGAST MADE AN ERROR?

McFarland May Have Fooled Him on Weight Question.

PAIR TO MEET IN MILWAUKEE.

Will Be a Battle of Ten Rounds, and Chicago Boy Expects to Win After a One Sided Bout—On Other Hand, Wolgast Says He'll Knockout Packy.

Has the world's lightweight champion, Ad Wolgast, made a serious mistake in consenting to meet Packy McFarland in a ten round contest in Milwaukee, Sept. 15? Sporting men who have followed the work of these crack boxers cannot agree in framing an answer to this oft repeated question.

Photos by American Press Association.

PACKY M'FARLAND AND AD WOLGAST WHO ARE TO MEET IN MILWAUKEE.

James J. Jeffries, for instance, declares that Wolgast has blundered in allowing McFarland to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock, and even Tom Jones, Wolgast's manager, holds a similar opinion. Wolgast, on the other hand, is as stubborn as a mule and refuses to admit that McFarland will have even a slight advantage in physical strength, although he admits that Packy will enter the ring at least six pounds heavier.

Having induced Wolgast to agree to his terms, therefore, McFarland, in the opinion of those who knew his methods, has put one over on the world's title holder.

It is conceded that Wolgast has never met a boxer like McFarland. The stockyards pugilist is a marvel in point of science. He is the quickest man on his feet in pugilism, and for that reason he can put up a wonderful defense. Moving about the ring with dazzling swiftness, McFarland can shoot in blows with either hand in such a manner that a slower opponent becomes bewildered. Wolgast is not a scientific man by a long shot, and McFarland is well aware of the fact. The champion's best work is done at close quarters by rushing in, covered up, and letting fly at his rival's body with a free hand in half clinches. McFarland never has allowed an antagonist to fight him that way, for he persists in keeping at long range, sacrificing hard hitting for speed.

Wolgast intends to fight McFarland just as he did Moran, but McFarland is Moran's master in every way, and the ring sharps believe that Wolgast will find it a difficult task to inflict severe punishment. Wolgast is what is known as a "rope fighter," because he persists in driving his opponents to the edges of the ring or the corners so that they cannot get away from his rough assaults. But not one of the men Wolgast has conquered could begin to compare with McFarland in footwork. As a matter of fact, nobody has possessed sufficient cleverness to know how to fight the lightweight champion, but McFarland says he has studied his man with great care and has hit upon a plan to offset his rugged assaults.

If Wolgast is outpointed by the Chicago phenomenon he will have himself to blame, but he has an anchor to windward in McFarland's promise to meet him again in a twenty round contest in California. If they hook up on the coast the weight will be the same, but McFarland will insist that the lightweight title shall be at stake. Packy always has contended that as long as a man can make 133 pounds during any part of the day of the fight the championship is involved, but on this point there may be a serious hitch.

Football to Be Regular Study.

Leland Stanford university will teach Rugby football as a regular course, for which one unit of credit will be given. This action, just announced by the California college, will do much to strengthen the varsity team and will go far in replacing the loss occasioned by the abolition of the freshman intercollegiate game. The instruction in the game is to be given under direction of Captain Kenny Dole of last year's team, and some good men are expected to be developed from the gymnasium classes.

HE WOULDN'T BE A HERO

By M QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press

Joe Harper was a sturdy young farmer, and Ellen Taylor was the daughter of another, and they were engaged to be married. All their friends said it would be a sensible match. Joe was given the credit of lots of "horse sense," and no one could say that the young woman was a bit frivolous. That is, they couldn't until after a certain girl friend of hers from town had made her a three weeks' visit and left four or five novels behind her when she departed.

Those novels were about heroes, cavaliers, chevaliers and knights. They told of perils, combats and rescues. Mrs. Taylor would have chucked them into the stove had she found them and boxed her daughter's ears besides, but she didn't find them. They were read at night after the rest of the family was asleep. By the time she had finished the second one the girl was looking askance at Joe. He was sunburned and freckled; his ears were rather large; instead of saying pritikes, he said by gosh. In all the novels the chevaliers had plumes in their hats; Joe didn't even wear a hen's feather in his old straw. He had a hoe on his shoulder instead of a lance, and he plowed corn with an old flea-bitten mare instead of riding around on an Arabian steed.

No, Joe didn't size up for shucks, compared to the chevaliers.

In the meadow, near the field where Joe was plowing corn, a colony of humble bees had taken up their quarters in a tuft of grass. This fact was known to the Taylor family, and the farmer intended to rout them out some evening. Bumble bees are not chevaliers, but they are the next thing to it. At 2 o'clock one afternoon, when it was seen that Joe and the old mare were hard at work, Miss Ellen put on her bonnet and walked out to that humblebee caucus. At five feet from it she halted and screamed and danced around.

The scream reached Joe Harper's ears, and he let go of the plow handles and made for the fence. In an instant he realized the situation, but he didn't dash forward and fall over several stumps. Instead of so doing he sat on the fence and called out:

"Ellen, why in thunder don't you run away?"

"Oh, the humble bees!" she shouted.

"Yes, but don't stand there like an idiot! Make for the house!"

A week had passed and the stings had been cured, when Joe got another chance. At 2 o'clock one afternoon Miss Ellen sat on the veranda sewing and wondering how Joe would look in armor and on horseback, when she caught sight of a big dog coming along the highway on the gallop. She screamed for Joe again. He dropped his hoe and came running, but paused as he reached the fence to ask what was the matter.

"Mad dog! Mad dog!" she shouted.

"Then climb up that ladder on to the roof of the kitchen!"

No rushing to the rescue, no beating the dog's brains out, no remarks worth leaving to posterity. Miss Ellen was furious with him. That was the reason a rung of the ladder broke as she was descending and precipated her on an ashheap. Within an hour the chevalier of the hoe received word that he need never show up at the Taylor house again. The engagement was off.

"Now look at that!" he exclaimed when he had been made to understand. "There was that ladder handy to climb. I saw the dog coming and knew it belonged to Perkins. Was there any need for me to break my other suspender? And if it had been a real mad dog would it have helped the case any for both of us to have been bitten?"

Joe stayed away. He had been told to and he obeyed. At the end of two weeks he took a day off to go fishing. Miss Ellen heard through her brother that he was going, and she made a little plan. She had got over being mad at the man who wouldn't be heroic. In fact, she wanted to "make up." She would go a-fishing too. She wouldn't fish for fish, but for Joe Harper. The lover of other and happier days was fishing from a shady bank when she came into view, but he was on the other side of the stream. He watched her walk out on a stranded log and said to himself:

"If she gets a bite and jerks up her pole she'll sure go off that log."

Two minutes later the thing happened. There was a nibble, a jerk and a souse, and after the souse a yell for Joe. He had been seen. The water was only about three feet deep, and as the girl gained her feet after the souse she was called to:

"Don't get skeurt, Ellen!"

"Oh, Joe—Joe!"

"You can wade ashore easy enough."

"Joe, I shall—shall"—

"No, you won't."

In the six weeks following the bets were ten to one that Joe and Ellen would never marry, but those who gave the odds lamented it. The two met on the highway, and after pretending not to see each other they halted, and the girl said:

"Joe, I wanted to marry a hero."

"Well, I hain't one."

"I wanted to marry a hero, but I guess I'll have to take up with a great, big, good natured, slabsided farmer."

"Looks that way to me, Ellen," smiled Joe, and that evening the marriage day was set.

FULTON COUNTY EXCITED

Russell Sipes, 23 years old, may be lying dead in the mountain fastnesses of Fulton county, or may be seeking, as an outlaw, to defy the course of justice. At least, he is a badly wanted young man.

Young Sipes accused of applying the torch to several barns in McConnellsburg, obtained his freedom with apparent ease. The sheriff is held under bail for the October term of court to answer the charge of permitting the prisoner to gain his liberty through gross negligence.

Searching parties that have penetrated McConnellsburg's homes have failed to find him, and redoubled efforts are being made to capture him, the borough offering a reward of $100 for his apprehension.

Following a series of barn burnings, the arrest of Sipes and his escape from jail, four men appeared before Justice of the Peace S. M. Robison, August 17, and preferred charges against Sheriff Harris. These men were Mach Steiman, a day laborer; Rev. Clifford E. Hays, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, formerly of Hagerstown, and a graduate of the Theological Seminary; W. H. Nesbit, burgess of McConnellsburg, and W. H. Greathead, a merchant.

Harris was held in $500 bail for a hearing before Justice Robison. He waived a hearing and was held under $500 bail to appear at the October term of court.

The sheriff threatens suit against those who, he says, are defaming his character. His residence, butcher shop and ice house at Webster Mills were burned out in April.

PROTEST AGAINST FEDERAL COURTS

Governors Rap Decision Against States Regulating R. R. Rates.

JUSTICE SANBORN ATTACKED

Declare Unless Supreme Court Respects State Rights the States Will Soon Become Mere Federal Provinces.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 15.—The house of governors sprang a new idea in American politics.

It voted 25 to 1 to send a committee of three to appeal to the supreme court of the United States to check "the autocracy of inferior federal courts."

With Judson Harmon, of Ohio, as chairman, and Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, and Chester H. Aldrich, of Nebraska, as the other members, the committee will protest to the supreme court that federal judges have unwarrantedly forbidden states to regulate railroad rates within their boundaries. It will argue that federal courts have unconstitutionally limited the powers of state legislatures.

The pretext for the appeal will be the decision of Justice Sanborn, of the United States circuit court of appeals, enjoining the railroad commission of Minnesota from regulating interstate rates on the ground that such regulation could not be enforced and would deprive the roads of proper remuneration and would interfere with interstate commerce.

But the governors take the broader view that unless the supreme court by its final decisions respects state rights the states will soon become mere federal provinces.

Governor Harmon, of Ohio, was one of five governors who convinced the conference that the time had come for the states to call on the supreme court for help. The others who were especially prominent in bringing about this action were: Stubbs, of Kansas; Hadley, of Missouri; O'Neal, of Alabama, and Aldrich, of Nebraska.

Harmon and O'Neal are Democrats; Stubbs and Aldrich are Republicans.

Denounced Federal Courts.

The naming of the committee came at the end of a session remarkable for denunciation of the federal courts. Heretofore since the conference began the house of governors limited itself to mild discussions of economic questions and an interchange of opinions on the best way for governors to govern. All of a sudden the temper of the conference changed. Hadley, of Missouri, let go with sharp criticism of Justice Sanborn, of the court of appeals, and Aldrich, of Nebraska, followed with a furious attack on Sanborn and an accusation that federal judges were autocrats who had to be curbed.

Kitchin, of North Carolina, protested mildly that the house of governors had no license to tell the supreme court what it ought to do. Gilchrist, of Florida, wanted to know if the conference supposed that the supreme court would "let itself be bulldozed by three lawyers, even if those lawyers were Governors Harmon, Hadley and Aldrich." But they were swept back by a wave of enthusiasm. The thing was settled in thirty minutes, just before the governors flocked to a pink tea at a country house. Kitchin, of North Carolina, alone voted no.

The committee's procedure, as announced by Governor Aldrich, will be to go before the supreme court in their capacity as governors and plead that the inferior federal courts are meddling dangerously. They will ask the supreme court to upset Justice Sanborn's decision in the Minnesota rate cases now before the supreme court on appeal, and will be prepared, as Governor Aldrich says, to lay before Chief Justice White and the associate justices evidence that Justice Sanborn decided the case against a preponderating weight of expert opinion and conclusions. The committee hoped, he said, to get a reversal in the Minnesota cases, but its chief aim was to impress the supreme court that states' governors are aroused over the nullifying by federal courts of states' rights.

GERMANS STOP "INVADERS"

"English Army" Forced to Retire in Mimic Battle.

Woldegk, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Sept. 15.—At the resumption of the military maneuvers the "red" or invading "English" army under Prince Friedrich Leopold was turned by enveloping operations on both flanks and compelled to retire hastily several miles to the northwest of the line, where the final "battle," with Berlin as the stake, is expected to take place.

The losses on both sides were theoretically very heavy, particularly on the part of the invaders, who sacrificed two complete batteries and a regiment of infantry.

SAY BOY ELOPER IS DIVORCE PLOT DUPE

Rich Man's Wife Fled With Him to Hurry Suit.

New York, Sept. 15.—A remarkable explanation of the Suydam-Noble elopement was offered by the friends of the aristocratic young matron and some of the relatives of the youth with whom she eloped, when they declared that the relations between the pair were entirely platonic, and that the escapade was planned for the sole purpose of forcing Walter Lispenard Suydam, Jr., to bring divorce proceedings in order that his impulsive and dissatisfied wife might be rid of him.

One young member of the fashionable summer colony at Blue Point, who has been on terms of close friendship with Frederick Noble for several years, went so far as to say that the boy was really not the soul mate Mrs. Suydam had chosen in preference to her husband and was merely playing the part of an innocent victim of the young woman's wiles.

Carrying this amazing exposition further, it was said that Mrs. Suydem merely regarded young Noble in the light of a good natured boy, who was infatuated enough to do her bidding and to go to any lengths she desired; that, while they left Blue Point on the same day and in each other's company, they parted immediately upon their arrival in New York and have since only pretended to be together.

20,000 FLEE FROM LAVA

Mt. Etna Forces Peasants From Houses, Cutting Off Water Supply.

Catania, Italy, Sept. 15.—The 20,000 inhabitants of Castiglione and Francavilla turned their backs upon their homes, fleeing before the advancing flood of lava from Mount Etna. Both towns are threatened with complete destruction.

The discharge from the crater and new fissures increases in volume. The main stream pouring down the northeastern side of the volcano has made its way sluggishly about and over the foothills toward the base, crossed the railway and invaded the valley of the Alcantara.

The front of the lava stream, fifty feet high and a third of a mile wide, broke over a long declivity and, gathering velocity, forced the peasant dwellers in its path to make a hurried retreat. It cut off the water supply of several villages.

When the stream was within three miles of Castiglione and Francavilla the people collected their portable property and made for the higher places.

RUSSIAN PREMIER IS WOUNDED

Stolypin Attacked by Assassin in Kiev Theatre.

THE STATESMAN MAY DIE

His Home Was Once Wrecked by a Bomb and Over a Score Were Killed or Wounded.

Kiev, Russia, Sept. 15.—Premier Stolypin was attacked and seriously wounded during a theater performance here. His assailant was arrested.

Peter Arcadievitch Stolypin was made prime minister in October, 1906. Within a week his home was wrecked by a bomb, two of his children were maimed for life and a score of visitors were killed or injured.

At the moment of the explosion M. Stolypin was in his private office, and while the force of the explosion was so great as to leave the house in utter ruin he was only slightly injured on the face and neck by flying splinters.

Immediately following the tremendous roar of the bursting bomb there were a few moments of stupefaction, in which every living person present lay on the floor, all having been hurled from their feet. Then the enormity of the tragedy dawned upon them, and those who were able to do so stood up and gazed upon a blood freezing spectacle.

Everywhere around them their eyes rested upon fragments of human bodies in great pools of blood, and on top of these the broken and splintered timbers which fell with a crash from above. Added to the awful picture and completing the terrible realism of it were the agonised cries of men, women and children as they either lay motionless and powerless on the floor or crawled or groped over the bodies of the dead to the open air.

The aeroplane turned turtle and crashed to the ground, pinning Paine under the wreckage. He was unconscious when removed to a hospital.

SHOOTS TEASER AND HOLDS POLICE AT BAY

Fired on Besiegers and Then Kills Himself.

Mount Carmel, Pa., Sept. 15.—Because fellow boarders taunted him that he was stuck up because he washed up in his room instead of in the kitchen of the boarding house, Alex Kaulic, aged twenty-two years, went out, got two revolvers and came back and fired at the boarders.

One bullet struck William Mafeski in the stomach, inflicting a wound that may prove fatal. He then ran to his room and barricaded the doors. The police came, but he fired on them and drove them away. He held his position against all comers for five hours. By this time the entire town was in a state of great excitement.

Kaulic fired on everybody who attempted to dislodge him. Finally Sergeant Walter Snyder and Private Hyde, of the state police, stationed at Shamokin, were summoned. When they arrived on the scene Kaulic had just driven back a constable who attempted to fire upon him from an adjoining house.

The two policemen managed to get into the house and were going up the steps to the room, when they heard a shot. Snyder burst open the door of the room, to find Kaulic lying on a couch with a bullet hole in his temple. He had buckled an old sword that he used while in the Hungarian army around his waist and had an extra revolver stuck in the belt. It is believed that the taunting of his fellow boarders drove the man insane.

Two Are Dead and Family of Three Is Dying.

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., Sept. 15.—As the result of eating poisonous toadstools in mushrooms which they had gathered a few hours before, Mrs. Mary Muchool and her daughter Nora, nine years old, died, and three members of the Lyons family, Michael and Rose, father and mother, and Nora, the daughter, are dying.

The first victim of the poisonous fungi was little Nora Muchool. She and her mother went out just before supper to gather mushrooms in a meadow near their home in Dutchess Junction. Both mother and daughter ate of them and a few hours later were taken violently ill.

Dr. Keating was sent for and he at once discovered that the mother and daughter had been poisoned. The physician was called to the Lyons house and there he found three members of the family suffering from the same poison. Despite energetic efforts the members of the Lyons family are sinking and their recovery is said to be impossible.

LYNCH PROBE GETS NEW INFORMATION

Witnesses Tell Names of Coatesville Mob Leaders.

SENSATION IS LOOKED FOR

It Is Said the Names of Those Who Forced Walker Back Into the Fire Are Known to Grand Jury.

West Chester, Pa., Sept. 15.—It was reported, following the adjournment of the grand jury probing the lynching of Zach Walker, at Coatesville, that several surprises had been sprung before the probers, and that the identity of three of the ringleaders of the mob had been disclosed.

The district attorney stated that an additional lot of Coatesville residents had been subpoenaed by state troopers. The witnesses called were Thomas Gill and wife, J. S. Pennegar, borough treasurer; Herbert Ford, an undertaker; John Coleman, colored; Samuel Ruth, colored, and Charles Gross.

The rumor of a coming sensation gained credibility from the manner in which several witnesses were repeatedly recalled to the jury room and questioned by the district attorney, Robert S. Gawthrop.

According to the report, the three names divulged were of the men who thrust the colored man upon the fire and afterward shoved him back in the burning hay when, with frantic struggles, he had gotten free and climbed a fence.

Charles Gross, an employe of the Beaver Dam Paper mills, of Coatesville, was one witness, it is said, who was either forced to give one of the names or else was confronted by Bertha Middleton, colored, who declared that he had told her of one of the ringleaders.

Gross was called into the jury room three times. Subsequently Bertha Middleton was summoned before the probers. Rumor had it that Bertha told of a conversation which she had with Gross in which he said that Chester Stanley, an employe of the Worth Iron mills, had told him that he (Stanley) had pushed Walker back into the fire with a fence rail.

When Gross was recalled it was said that he denied the alleged conversation. Bertha was called in again and confronted the man. When Gross emerged the last time he was shaking and frightened.

In an extremely nervous manner he walked through the corridor or sat restlessly on a bench, his face pale and his hands picking at his coat.

Two other names, it is said, were divulged by John Pennington, a colored preacher. It is claimed that the two named by him were among those who shoved Walker back on the blazing fire.

Faith in the jury's ability to accomplish any great results is now losing ground, although the residents of the county have a wholesome respect for the prowess of the state. A feeling is gaining ground that the county and state authorities will hang on to the last and never give up until the point is reached where every bit of available testimony has been introduced.

The leading residents of Coatesville were called, not in the hope that they could give any inkling of the perpetrators of the atrocity, but rather in the hope that they could recommend some plans of procedure which the grand jury might adopt.

"One suggestion made to us was that the grand jury be dismissed and that the county commissioners offer a substantial reward for the apprehension and conviction of the ringleaders," the district attorney declared. "The plan was not thought feasible at the present time by the grand jury. It might have been accomplished at the start, but at that the chances are that it would have failed, they thought. I have subpoenaed a number of new witnesses for this week, probably sixty or seventy in all, and we will go ahead and examine them."

FROST HITS THE TOBACCO CROP

New England Fields Believed to Have Suffered Heavily.

Suffield, Conn., Sept. 15.—Under the heaviest frost for twenty-five years at this time of the year 400 acres of tobacco were completely ruined, reports from growers placing the aggregate loss at $210,000.

Earlier in the season 500 acres were ruined by hail. The one or two tobacco fields near Suffield which were covered by cloth were the only ones to escape a total loss.

The harvesting of the tobacco crop in the Connecticut valley is generally begun during the latter part of August and finished by Sept. 10, but the rains during the past two weeks made it impossible this year to cut the tobacco in time. The frost was unusually heavy for this time of year.

Vegetables Jump In Price.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 15.—All vegetables sold by the incoming farmers advanced from 10 to 60 per cent as a result of the heavy frost in this region. Farmers report heavy damage by the frost all over the country.

Tender Plants Damaged.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 15.—A sudden cool wave swept over eastern Pennsylvania, the temperature reaching the frost line. Light frost, the first of the season, was noticeable in this city and vicinity. Tender plants were nipped.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 15. — The Wolgast-McFarland boxing bout billed for tonight was called off by the National A. C., after a conference of the club officials, following the lengthy conference between club representatives and county officials, together with Acting Governor Morris.

It was evident from the stand taken by the acting governor and Sheriff Arnold, with the backing of the district attorney, that any attempt to pull the contest on would not be permitted. It is believed that an effort will be made to stage the bout on the Pacific coast or in New York.

MY AEROPLANE ADVENTURES

BY

J. ARMSTRONG DREXEL

VI.—When a Man Takes to Flying

[Copyright, 1911, by Henry M Neely Copyright in Great Britain and Canada All rights reserved.]

WHEN a man takes to flying he enters upon a career which is the most troublesome and yet the most fascinating that has ever been opened up for human beings. He invades a realm for which nature never intended him. All of his instincts teach him that to ascend high above the earth is to court death and that to trust himself to so flimsy and so breakable a thing as an aeroplane is to go to the utter extreme of recklessness and daring.

"I FELT THAT THE HEAVENS WERE TUMBLING ABOUT MY EARS."

My admiration is unbounded for these first men who actually rose off of the ground in their crude heavier than air machines and defied nature with their new found toy. Each of us who has followed has had to prove his nerve and his skill, but we know when we start to learn that the machines we trust ourselves to are right, that they will fly if properly handled and that there is no very great [illegible] at all [illegible] and we need merely do as our predecessors did. But those first men dashed absolutely into the unknown.

Not long ago Captain Thomas S Baldwin, the veteran balloonist and aviator, investigated the subject and as a result he declared that every beginner in aviation smashes up $2,000 worth of property before he can get a certificate of competence, and one can easily imagine the risk to life and limb that is constantly run while these fledgling flights are being made. In my own case, when the mechanics let go of my machine for my first flight, it looked as though I were going to disprove this statement, but it was not many seconds thereafter before I showed that, if anything, Captain Baldwin's estimate of cost was altogether too low.

My First Lesson In Flying.

My first lesson was taken from Grahame-White at Pau. His Bleriot was equipped with an Anzani motor, for it was before the Gnome had been placed upon the market, and it was probably fortunate for me that my machine did not have the greater horsepower developed by the later type of engine.

I learned as did most of the men who have made a success of the work. The controls were explained to me, and I made a thorough study of the theory on which the machine operates. I knew what to do to make the monoplane go up or down or steer to right or left, and I knew how to warp the wings to preserve my balance—that is, I knew them in theory, though I had, of course, never tried them in practice.

"Now," said Grahame-White, "you are to take a run along the ground and see if you can steer the machine. The wheel is tied so that you cannot go up into the air, and all you are to do is to keep going straight and shut off your engine when you come to the end of the field."

So my engine was started, and when the propeller got going at a fair speed I gave the signal to the mechanics who were holding the machine to let go, and I felt myself dash forward smoothly over the ground. I believed that all I had to do was to leave the machine pretty well alone and it would go in a straight line until I stopped the engine, but in this I was destined to meet with a great surprise, for instead of going straight ahead I found myself going around in a circle to the left, and almost before I knew it I was back at my starting place and had stopped the engine.

Then Grahame-White explained to me that a Bleriot always has a tendency to steer to the left when it is running along the ground. This is due to the downward thrust of the propeller and the greater effect of the air pressure on one side than another. After being instructed to steer with my foot lever until I got going at full speed I started off again. This time at the first sign of a pull toward the left I thrust out my right foot and headed her the other way. Once more I had to do this, and then I attained full speed and was able to keep on in a straight line down the course.

Feeling with the utmost confidence that the tying of the wheel would make it impossible for me to rise from the ground, I had not the slightest nervousness as to the outcome of my journey, and I thoroughly enjoyed my dash down that mile of level earth at a rate of about thirty or thirty five miles an hour. But again I was destined to a great surprise—a surprise that taught me to fly much as one teaches a boy to swim by throwing him in the water and letting him strike out for himself.

I Find Myself In the Air.

At the end of the mile straight away on the course was a road crossing the field at right angles and at an elevation of several feet above the rest of the ground. Without thinking much about this road and feeling perhaps that so slight and so gradual an embankment was not a serious obstacle I went dashing merrily on and up the slope toward the highway.

A few minutes later my utter astonishment may be imagined when I suddenly realized that I was not upon the ground at all, but was sailing gracefully through the air at a height of about eighty feet above the earth.

The explanation is simple enough to me now. When the front of my machine took the slope of the embankment it rose until the slant of my planes was exactly what was necessary for the impact of the air to get under them and give the required lifting power for the machine to fly. In other words, the embankment did for me what I might have done for myself had my wheel not been tied, and it sent my machine upward into the air as gracefully and as easily as though it had been purposely operated for that result by the most skilled aviator.

For the first few minutes my astonishment was so great that I did absolutely nothing but sit motionless and let the Bleriot take its course. Then I pulled myself together and tried to remember everything that Grahame-White had told me about how to manage the machine.

My one thought was to get back to my starting point, for by this time I had gone beyond the smooth fields and was flying over rough and dangerous ground that would have meant instant disaster had I landed upon it. So, in order to turn, I thrust my left foot gently forward, and I shall never forget my thrill of triumph as I found the Bleriot gradually sweeping about in a wide and easy circle to the left that soon brought me again back to the smooth fields and facing toward the direction from which I had come.

An Unexpected Disaster.

As I approached my starting place I shoved my wheel gently forward, as I had been instructed to do to come down, and a few moments thereafter I landed as lightly as a bird, feeling that my first flight had indeed been a triumph unmarred in any way and entirely disproving the discouraging things I had heard about the difficulties of learning to fly.

I landed with the wind and going at a speed well up between fifty and sixty miles an hour, and not twenty feet from where I touched the ground was a high fence. Into this I crashed at full speed. I felt a sudden jar and heard the loud noises of splintering wood all about me—so loud indeed that I felt that the heavens were tumbling about my ears. Then I felt another jar as I fell to the earth, and when I had recovered my senses sufficiently to examine the wreck I found that there was not much left except the seat and me. For the seat I had no very high regard, but I was mighty glad and grateful to find that I was able to get up and walk about with only a score or so of sore spots distributed over my body.

I must have been an awful sight to behold. From the very beginning of my flight, unaccustomed as I was to hurtling at such a rate through the air, the wind had lashed my eyes as though with whipcords, and my eyeballs had become sore and inflamed. The oil from the engine had been dashed back on to my face, and there it had mingled in grimy brotherhood with the water that streamed from my eyes under the lashing of the wind.

It took me a long while to get used to this pain caused in the eyes by the rushing air, and during the next few weeks when I began flying with the Gnome engine I got a double dose of lubricating oil in my hair, all over my face and down my neck.

I flew with the first Gnome engine ever put upon the market. It was a short time after I had taken my initial lessons from Grahame-White and when I was in the school run by Bleriot himself at Pau.

It was a vastly different matter to start a flight with this new motor. Instead of having an easy run along the ground and lifting at a speed of about thirty miles an hour, as I had done with Grahame-White's Anzani, I now found myself rushing along at nearly fifty miles an hour almost as soon as the mechanics let go of the machine. Here my poor eyes got a lashing which I shall never forget and which daily nearly blinded me until I became accustomed to flying at this tremendous speed.

I Go In For High Flying.

From the very first the one phase of aviation that held a really powerful fascination for me was altitude climbing. No sooner had I tried my fledgeling wings than I looked longingly into the upper air and wanted to climb as far as my engine would carry me.

On the third day of my practice at the Bleriot school with the Gnome motor I decided to take affairs into my own hands, and, disregarding all the advice that had been given me, I headed the machine upward and climbed close to a thousand feet, when suddenly, one after the other, three of my cylinders went bad, and I was forced to coast down to the ground again. It was the result of some minor defect in the new engine, and when it was repaired I took my equipment with me to my place at Beaulieu, in England, there to practice a bit and then try for my certificate, or aviator's license.

I became proficient in a remarkably short time. When I felt that I could pass inspection I had the officials of the English Aero club appoint a day when I should try for my certificate. An official came up to wish me good luck just before my mechanics started the propeller, and I asked:

"What is the English height record?"

"Paulhan has it," he replied. "It is 977 feet."

"Well," I said as I turned away, "I am going to try to beat that."

I started off in wide circles, and the first two times I passed over the heads of the officials I saw one of them wave a red flag, the signal for a naval officer with a sextant to take my height. Higher and higher I went, but I was surprised not to see the flag wave after that, and I came to earth again.

"How much did I do?" I asked the navy officer.

"Ten hundred and forty feet," he replied. "You have broken the English altitude record, and I believe you went twice as high as that, but unfortunately the man who was to signal me with the flag got mixed up somehow, and I only took your height on your first and second circles."

This love of altitude work has been my constant passion ever since. Merely to get into an aeroplane and fly no longer has any fascination for me. I want to climb. I want to keep going up until I am sure that I am higher than any man has ever been before in a heavier than air machine, and, though not long ago I almost determined to give up aeroplane work, I now feel the desire growing stronger upon me, and it would not surprise me if I tried for another record soon.

Eternal practice and unfailing patience are necessary when the average man takes to flying. Day after day he must go out "grass cutting," as they say at Mineola when the novices roll along the ground or take only short, low jumps into the air. This is not exciting and it will seem to the would be pilot that he is making slow progress, but, as a matter of fact, he is training his mind and his muscles to work in unison and by instinct, and this faculty alone is worth all the trouble it takes to acquire it once it is called into play in a bad spot high above the earth. It may not be needed very often, but, like a gun in Texas, when it is needed it is needed badly.

ROBBERS SPEND NIGHT TRAVELING

Took Hand Car and Ran up and down Western Maryland Tracks between Highfield and Fairfield. Frightened away at Latter Place.

Traveling back and forth between Highfield and Fairfield on a stolen hand car two thieves spent a busy night of it which would likely have been very profitable had they not been discovered at Fairfield station and put to rout.

The men, who are unknown, took the hand car of the Highfield Section gang and going down the railroad track stopped first at Charmian where they gained entrance to Clarence Martin's store and took some flour. They then resumed their journey down the mountain on the car and reached Fairfield Station about half past four.

Their coming awakened Mr. Cease, the section boss at that place, and he at once began an investigation, thinking it strange that the hand car should be taken out at such an hour. By the time Mr. Cease got out of his house he found the car on the track opposite the warehouse but no one was to be seen or heard. He at once got the car to the tool house near by. It contained in addition to the flour, two bicycles and several bags of what is supposed to have been feed.

By the time Mr Cease had the car off the track the men had again appeared and at once started throwing stones at him, using oaths as they continued their attack. Mr. Cease shouted for help and John Bierly, who lives nearby, came upon the scene with a loaded rifle only to find the robbers going down the track on the car.

They went to a place about a mile below Virginia Mills where they left the car on the track and then started away with the bicycles and some other things that could be carried easily. It is believed their visit to Fairfield Station was for the purpose of robbing the warehouse and that the timely arrival of Mr. Cease and Mr. Bierly was all that prevented them from accomplishing their plan.

BADLY BURNED

John Merz, of Biglerville, was badly burned by an explosion of gas at his apple evaporating plant in Biglerville Thursday evening. The gasoline engine was not working satisfactorily and Mr. Merz, taking a lighted lantern, went into the building where the gasoline pit is located. Suddenly the gas ignited and Mr. Merz was surrounded by flames. He was got out with difficulty. His face and hands were badly burned. His shoes were burned but his feet were not hurt. He is recovering nicely though suffering considerable discomfort.

MUSICAL AUTO

A large Winton touring car with a Gabriel horn playing a number of different tunes was the center of attraction for a number of Gettysburg people on Tuesday. "All Alone" and "Yankee Doodle" proved favorites while the bugle calls were also enjoyed. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Foster and Mr and Mrs. James L. Paton, all of Cleveland Ohio. They stopped at Hotel Gettysburg and C. A. Sheads was guide for the battlefield trip.

LURED AWAY FROM CONVENT

Girl Lured from St. Joseph's Convent at McSherrystown is Held as Witness. Hunted for Several Months

Helen Berens the 18 year old Washington girl, formerly of the McSherrystown convent, arrested in Boston a week ago in company with a woman who gave her name as Gertrude Toy, is detained at the Boston Jail as a United States witness in a pending trial for violation of the white slave statute, under which charge the Toy woman is held in $8,000 bail.

The girl is said to have been lured away from a convent by the Toy woman and later taken to Philadelphia. The accused, who also gave her name as Mrs Grace Dodd Browner, says she met the Berens girl and a few months later the authorities of the convent St. Joseph's at McSherrystown, notified Helen's parents that she was missing with Mrs. Toy. Ernest Dodd, father of Mrs Toy, is a former dairyman of Washington.

After a search of months by the police of various cities Helen Berens was arrested in Boston several nights ago by Federal officers, along with Mrs Toy.

Mr. and Mrs Berens have gone to Boston for the trial, at which their daughter is expected to testify.

ADAMS COUNTY FARM SALES

Mrs Barbara F Witmer, of Hanover, has sold to George W. Worley, of Conewago township, 25 acres of land in that township for $85 an acre. The land is a part of her Union township farm.

Daniel B Brandt, Cumberland county, has purchased the D. P. Wagner mill and farm, located near East Berlin, for $[illegible],000.

Arthur L. Babb, Bermudian, has purchased the 57 acre farm of William Criswell, situated in Latimore township for $41.10 an acre.

Paul B. Dubs, Penn township, York county, has purchased from Leo A. Sneeringer, a farm of 134 acres in Conewago township for $85 05 an acre.

O. I. M. Houck, of Hanover, has purchased the Wohler farm in Hamiltonban township for $8,592 50. The property contains 175 acres.

FOUND BROTHER'S GRAVE

Mr. and Mrs. David McKelvey, of Greensburg, were guests at the Shealer House Friday. They had a drive over the battlefield and found the grave of Mrs. McKelvey's brother, Samuel Finfrock, who was killed during the third day's fight. He was recognized by a letter found in his pocket written by his sister three days before the battle. This was Mrs. McKelvey's first visit to Gettysburg.

FINED FOR SPEEDING

C. B. Redding was fined $10 00 and costs of $5.50 for automobile speeding in town by Squire Hill Saturday. Mr Redding admitted having gone over the twelve mile limit and did not ask a hearing. The offense was committed the day of Chamberlin Spease wedding when Mr. Redding was taking the bride and groom to Hanover to take a train.

CAUGHT TRYING TO MAKE ESCAPE

Joseph Branon Got into Jail Cellar when he was Discovered by Other Prisoners. Would have had Little Trouble Getting away.

Joseph Branon, alleged chicken thief and charged with resisting arrest, attempted to escape from the county jail Friday afternoon while Sheriff Fissel was absent. He was frustrated in his attempt by the arrival of several other prisoners at the scene of his operations.

Branon wandered away from the balance of the prisoners who were playing games in the corridor and went into the wash room where he worked quietly and succeeded in getting up two of the boards from the floor. Through the hole made in this way he dropped into the cellar under the jail. His plan was evidently to get from there into the cellar under the house and then make his way out. The cellar wall at some places between the jail and the house is none too strong and he would have had little difficulty.

The carrying out of these plans was given up, however, when several of the other prisoners detected him in his work. He made no attempt to go on evidently fearing that an alarm would be given.

It will be remembered that Branon was arrested several weeks ago one evening while walking on York street with Mrs Claybaugh who was later arrested charged with keeping a disorderly house and is now in jail awaiting trial. Branon is accused of shooting chickens belonging to another party.

BOLD HOLD-UP

Prof. Martinette and son of Baltimore, were held up and robbed on the path leading from Pen Mar to the Blue Mountain house Friday night about ten o'clock. Prof. Martinette and his son had been at the park and on their return to their rooms they were confronted by two men on the path in front of the chapel. The men pointed guns in their faces and demanded money. The robbers secured five ten dollar bills and a gold watch and made their escape.

Prof. Martinette and his son rushed to the hotel and told their story to the clerk who in turn notified the authorities and messages were sent to the nearby towns. Special Officer Conway of Pen Mar arrested two men who were beating their way on a freight train and they were held for a hearing.

LARGE WATERMELONS

O. C. Rice, of Rice Brothers' Produce Company, Biglerville, made a trip to Philadelphia on Thursday of this week and while there purchased three large watermelons the total weight of which amounted to 200 pounds. The largest one weighed 70 pounds. All were raised in New Jersey. They are now on exhibition in Biglerville where they have aroused considerable interest.

LARGE INVASION OF NEGRO FOLK

Almost Five Thousand Baltimore Negroes Brought here in Six Long Trains. Unruly on Way Here. Transportation Means Taxed.

Almost five thousand Baltimore negroes—4809 to be exact—arrived in town on Monday in six long trains over the Western Maryland and all day wandered through the town and over the battlefield, Round Top being the special place of attraction. The inevitable band was with them and big times were enjoyed at "the hill."

Disorder was frequent on the way here and one special railroad officer reported a gang of eight or ten pick pockets pursuing their vocation among their fellow passengers. One of the nimble fingered men was captured and taken before Squire Hill, who held him for Court. The man gave his name as Howard Lummert. George Smith was the loser by the deal, claiming that he had been relieved of $8 00. Another man on this same excursion was charged with assault and he, too, was sent up to the county jail.

In town the negroes did nothing out of the ordinary. There was the usual amount of drinking among both men and women, a number of the local bars being lined several deep with excursionists of both sexes. Outside of the amount of general noise to be expected there was no rowdyism worth speaking of.

The negroes created much interest in town. The harem skirt made its first appearance in Adams County, one of the women wearing a sort of combination harem and sheath skirt. Sombre black was the color of the creation.

Local means of conveying the "tourists" were severely taxed. The trolley cars were filled to capacity and scores were taken out on the running boards. Most of the available teams in town were pressed into service to get the visitors to the hill as quickly as possible but they had practically an all day job of it.

NEW ENEMY TO APPLES

A comparatively new insect is seriously injuring the apples in some portions of Northern Pennsylvania. It is a very small fly or gnat which pierces the fruit and lays its eggs so that its larvae or young develop in the seeds of the apple, and it is hence called the apple seed chalcid. It results in dwarfed and deformed fruits.

A correspondent in Bradford wrote to State Zoologist Surface in regard to the matter. In reply, Prof Surface advised the following method of combating the pest:

"The method is to destroy all the little, knotty and deformed apples. This could be done before or after they naturally drop from the tree. The apple seed chalcid remains in the seed during the winter. Thus if the apples were destroyed before winter, the pests would likewise be ended."

ROOSEVELT FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Ex-President Roosevelt has been Invited to Make Memorial Day Address here. Large Excursion of Trainmen already Arranged.

An invitation has been extended to ex-President Theodore Roosevelt to deliver the Memorial Day address at Gettysburg in 1912. The invitation was sent at the instance of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of North America who will hold their tenth bi-ennial convention in Harrisburg the week of Memorial Day.

The Philadelphia and Reading is going to give the delegates, who are expected to number about 1500, a free excursion to Gettysburg on May 30 and those in charge of the convention arrangements forwarded to Colonel Roosevelt an invitation to have him make an address here. This address, if delivered, will be the address of the day. It is understood that the local Grand Army Post has no objections to Mr. Roosevelt's being the orator of the day provided he does not touch on politics or labor questions. The veterans feel that Memorial Day is a time for memories and not for the discussion of present day topics.

The two trains bringing the railroad men will stop at the Mummasburg road crossing north of town and an address will be delivered by a guide from the crest of Oak Ridge. From there they will walk to the Reynolds' statue where another lecture will be given. Trains will then be run out on the Western Maryland tracks and the delegates taken out to High Water Mark. In this way they will not have to rely on the usual means which are always taxed on Memorial Day.

The railroaders will also be given complimentary excursions by the Pennsylvania Railroad during the convention ten day period. One will be to Washington and the other to Atlantic City. It is probable that Colonel Roosevelt will address their convention at Harrisburg the day after the Gettysburg visit.

FIFTY CARS IN GLIDDEN TOUR

Pathfinders and Official Car here to Make Arrangements for Big Automobile Run Next Month. Largest of the Year in U. S.

No less than fifty automobiles, and probably many more, will participate in the big Glidden tour which will come through Gettysburg next month, according to statements made by those with the pathfinding cars which spent Sunday here. The run will reach Gettysburg on Monday, October 16 and will stay here that night, the autoists engaging accommodations at the Eagle.

The first day's run is from New York to Philadelphia, 90 miles. The second day is to Gettysburg 120 miles and third from here to Staunton Virginia, 180 miles. The tour is from New York to Atlanta, Georgia, and Jacksonville, Florida, and is the largest and most important event of its kind in the United States this year.

It is a combination of the annual Glidden tour and the New York Herald-Atlanta Journal run and as a result is exciting no little interest. It will be recalled that for the past few years the Herald and the Journal have run their tours through Gettysburg choosing this as a point on the line of the national highway from North to South. Last year the tour arrived here after several days traveling through rainy weather and muddy roads and most of the cars were sorry sights, while their occupants were covered with mud.

A number of prominent automobile people will be with the run while Governor Hoke Smith, of Georgia, is the most widely known men in public life who has announced an intention of coming with the autoists.

The pathfinders have gone on their way south while a third official car, a Maxwell was here Monday with officials who made all necessary hotel and other arrangements. The pathfinders came in two Flanders 20 cars.

HUMOROUS QUIPS

Newfangled Schools.

They taught him how to hemstitch, and they taught him how to sing
And how to make a basket out of variegated string
And how to fold a paper so he wouldn't hurt his thumb—
They taught a lot to Bertie, but he couldn't do a sum.

They taught him how to mold the head of Hercules in clay
And how to tell the diff'rence 'twixt the bluebird and the jay
And how to sketch a horsie in a little picture frame
But strangely they forgot to teach him how to spell his name.

Now, Bertie's pa was cranky, and he went one day to find
What 'twas they did that made his son so backward in the mind
"I don't want Bertie wrecked!" he cried, his temper far from cool
"I want him educated!" So he took him out of school.

MORE TROUBLE WITH THE GUIDES

Chief Shealer and John Pitzer Have Lively Time at Philadelphia & Reading Station. Mr. Pitzer Thrown Down. Officer to Bring Charge.

Chief Shealer and John E Pitzer were the principals in a renewal of hostilities between local authorities and battlefield guides on Sunday morning at the Philadelphia and Reading station. During the fracas which followed the customary argument about the hackmen being over the two foot limit the officer and Mr. Pitzer got into a hand to hand fight which resulted in Mr. Pitzer's being thrown to the pavement. Others took a hand in the affair which was the worst that has occurred for many years among the crowd which frequents the railroad stations in quest of trade.

Sunday morning, so the story goes, Mr. Pitzer, with a number of other guides and hackmen, stationed himself at the Reading station and when the train came in was among those who, according to Chief Shealer, was over the line prescribed by the borough ordinance. The officer in pushing them back gave John Hoofnagle, one of Mr. Pitzer's men, a shove which resulted in his tumbling over and against a wagon.

When Mr. Pitzer was ordered back he called the attention of the officer to George Shealer who, it is claimed, was soliciting trade on the platform and said that he could not expect the others to get back while that was allowed. When Chief Shealer used force to get Mr. Pitzer back, Mr. Pitzer is alleged to have struck at him and the mix-up which resulted in the guide's fall followed.

Other parties got into the affair and the pair with, Special Officer Swope, started up town in search of a justice. Squire Hill was met but thought it best not to hold the hearing Sunday.

The affair created more excitement Sunday and more discussion ever since it happened than anything in guide circles for some months. Practically every one has taken sides and numerous and heated arguments have resulted. The guides object seriously to the soliciting of passengers on the platform and around the station but the police claim they have no jurisdiction there.

The Scrap Book

Educated Fingers.

It is often said that a Yorkshireman is so keen after money that he will grab at it dead or alive. A certain native worked at a sawmill, and one day he met with an accident, two of his fingers being cut off and dropping in the sawdust.

Of course the man was hurried off to the infirmary, and after he was gone his mates began to look for his fingers in the sawdust, when in walked the foreman, who said:

"I say, what are you wasting your time there for? Why don't you get on with your work?"

One of the men replied:

"That Yorkshire chap has had two fingers cut off, and we're looking for them."

"What a waste of time!" cried the foreman. "We'll soon find them."

And he threw half a crown on the floor, when up came the two missing fingers wriggling out of the sawdust to get at the money!

Her path is steep and high.
In vain he seeks her temple
Who is content to gaze and sigh.

But he alone can take it

A Queer Name.

One of the best navy stories of the sometimes amusing mistakes of the Britisher over names in common use in the United States is told by Rear Admiral W. P. Potter, U. S. N., on duty at Washington.

"Some years ago," said Rear Admiral Potter, "the old United States steamship Ohio steamed into a South American port and anchored near a British passenger steamship. She interested the passengers of the steamship very much.

"After a little a new man came on deck and began an eyeglass inspection of the battleship. He stared at the name OHIO for several moments and then exploded.

"'A "ho" and a "haitch" and a "10,"' he said to himself, 'Wot a 'ell of a name for a ship!'"

TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Fattening Chickens Quickly.

Many poultrymen have occasion to fatten their chickens quickly in order to get them in the markets and get advantage of the rise in price. Ground oats and barley meal mixed with cracklings of some kind make an excellent fattening food.

Place the food before the birds at regular intervals, as often as they desire it, but as soon as they have partaken of it liberally and appear to have enough remove the trough and do not give them any more until the next interval. They must not be allowed to eat and mess in their food all day long. Keeping the birds without their food for a few hours and then giving them a liberal amount often induce them to eat more than if fed too often.

Sheep Are Easily Handled.

Sheep, if treated kindly, are easier handled and more easily trained than either horses, cattle or hogs. With just a little effort one can teach them to drive or to follow from lot to pasture, and the reverse.

Every farmer should have a small flock, for the purpose of utilizing the waste about his place, cleaning his fence row of weeds and bushes, and enriching the soil. And when you consider the two sources of profit—the sale of wool and the sale of lambs at today's prices—it is clear that within a few years on most every farm there will be found a bunch of sheep.

Height of Henroosts.

Leghorns and the lighter breeds can nest most anywhere it suits the owner. It is hard to get anything too high for their convenience. In the matter of roosts you should always consider the breed. The lower the better for the heavy breeds. Bumblefoot and ruptures are very common among heavy hens that are made to jump from high perches or nests.

Silage a Money Saver.

The addition of silage to a ration of corn, cottonseed meal and clover hay does not materially affect the rate of gain or the selling price of the cattle, but does decrease the cost of gain from 50 cents to $1, and even more, per hundred pounds. These conclusions seem to be borne out by enough data to make them practically certain.

Time For First Calf.

A heifer should not be expected to drop a calf before she is two or two and a half years old. The latter age is preferable to the former. A heifer calf rarely has her growth until she is two and a half years old, and she cannot give a profitable flow of milk and make the necessary growth at the same time.

BUILDING UP A GOOD DAIRY HERD

First It Is Necessary to Banish Nonproducers.

To start in the dairy business we must first weed out the small producers from our herds, keeping only those whose annual product will net a profit, writes R. P. Kester in Farm and Fireside, then, being guided by the kind of cows in demand in that locality, whether desired for milk or for butter or cheese, procure the best sire of that breed money can buy and begin a system of building up a dairy herd of grade cows. Select the sire upon the producing record of his maternal ancestors. By purchasing a pure bred heifer or two at one time a start in a small way can be made in animals for registry. One thing should be kept in mind—if the cows retained after the weeding out process are grades of any particular breed a sire of that breed should be used. Crossing breeds with the idea of combining the good qualities of both always results in disappointment.

The calf must be fed from the start in such a way that the dairy cow qualities will be developed. Wrong feeding may produce beefy qualities in the best bred dairy calf. It should have the first milk of the mother, and her milk only for a few days at least. Whole milk should be fed for the first two or three weeks, gradually substituting skimmilk after that. Don't feed too much. Overfeeding causes indigestion and diarrhea. "A pint of milk to ten pounds of calf" is a variable rule. Watch the calf. It will soon begin to nibble a little hay, but let it be very little at first. A little whole oats—just a pinch—may be put in its bucket after drinking when about six weeks old. Increase the oats gradually, adding a little wheat bran or oilmeal later. Still later add a few grains of whole corn. By following out this system, feeding regularly, you will have a good cow, provided she has the inherited qualities.

Egg Condiments.

Condiments that stimulate egg production are very much like anything that stimulates a human being. After the immediate results wear off the bird is in worse shape than before being fed.

SAVED FROM A LIFE OF SLAVERY

Story of a Russian Wife's Love and Devotion.

In the Ural mountains, between Russia and Siberia, is the largest manufactory of sheet iron in the world. It is owned and operated by the Russian government, and its workmen live and die within the limits of the factory. Once entered on the rolls of the company an operative has bidden goodby forever to the outside world.

Dmitri Nikanovich, a young Russian, having been out of employment for a long while, saw his wife and children starving before him. "There is but one chance for our lives," he said to his wife. "I must go to the ironworks. There I shall receive regular wages, which I can send to you."

In vain his wife protested. They might die together rather than that the husband and father should be dead to them forever. No, he said. The winter was at hand and if they escaped starvation they would surely die by cold. Kissing his little ones, who were too young to understand what he was about to do, and leaving his swooning wife and them, he went to the ironworks and entered himself as a workman.

Four years passed. The wife and children of Nikanovich knew that he was still alive, for they received his wages regularly. He knew that they or some of them lived, for the money was not returned to him.

One day a new workman was entered at the factory. He was a young, delicate looking fellow and was given the lightest work that was to be done.

One morning this workman, who was entered under the name of Nicholas Artemvich, was standing beside Dmitri Nikanovich, both waiting to handle some sheet iron that had just been rolled, when Nicholas whispered:

"Be at the west wall tonight at 9 o'clock, midway between the fifth and sixth sentry towers."

Nikanovich, astonished, stared at the speaker. Nevertheless he had the presence of mind to hold his peace.

That night Nikanovich walked, as was permitted, from 8 to 9 o'clock between the factory buildings and the wall, and when the bell rang at 9 and the other workmen had disappeared he saw Artemvich beckoning him in a dark corner formed by the contiguous buildings. Indeed, the base stones of the buildings touched, leaving a recess behind them. Artemvich's head and shoulders only could be seen. Nikanovich cast a hasty glance around, and, making sure that no one saw him, he sprang over the stone into the recess.

"Dmitri, I am Anna, your wife!"

The thought that his wife had entered this place to be with him and that she had left their children filled him with alternate flashes of joy and sorrow. For a moment husband and wife were locked in each other's arms. Then Anna spoke rapidly:

"You had scarcely left us when my Aunt Martha died and left me 20,000 rubles. The first year I spent getting possession of the money and the remaining three in planning and preparing for your escape. Two years ago I began to dig a tunnel from the river bank to a point near the spot where we stand. It was completed before I entered this place, and since I have been here I have come to this corner at night and dug till I struck it, carrying the earth away in my pockets and keeping the entrance in this corner, where no one ever comes, concealed. I have sent our children beyond the borders. If we escape we may join them and find a home in America."

With that she drew from under her woolen shirt a case knife and began to dig. In a few minutes she had uncovered a square piece of wood and, lifting it, entered a perpendicular tunnel not much larger than her body. From this ran another, dipping slightly from the horizontal. Anna, followed by her husband, made her way through this horizontal tunnel. It was cramped at first, but grew larger as they advanced. The outlet was on the river bank a few feet above the water and covered with logs and brush. Just before emerging they passed through a space sufficiently large to contain a rowboat, in which there were a pair of oars.

"Those rowlocks," said Anna, "have been muffled for nearly a year, and the cloths are quite rotten. Still, they will serve to get us past the river guards without the noise of rowing."

"How did you get this boat in here?" asked Dmitri.

"I watched six months for the water to be sufficiently high to float it in."

"Did ever man have a wife so patient and devoted?" said her husband, embracing her.

"Come; let us be off."

Launching the boat, they floated down with the current, at times pulling with the oars, at times holding water to escape observation, at times shooting on rapidly. On the one hand was the factory, the officials of which with all their vigilance had not been able to keep apart these lovers, and on the other that distant border beyond which were the little ones they loved as they loved each other.

Thus they passed the night and when day dawned landed and in a peasant's cottage changed their attire and their appearance, then started for the border.

Two days later they suddenly appeared before their children. What words could give even a faint idea of this blessed reunion?

TEACHING GOOD ROADS LESSONS

Farmers in Missouri Are Learning at School.

ENGINEER INSTRUCTS THEM.

Novel Method of Trying to Keep Roads in Good Condition by Telling People How to Do It Given a Successful Trial at Columbia, Mo.—Fifty Farmers Attend First Day.

At Columbia, Mo., P. S. Quinn, highway engineer of Boone county, has organized a class in road building. At the first meeting of the class more than fifty farmers, all dressed in their working clothes, assembled in the circuit court room in the county courthouse and sat in a semicircle around the judge's desk. On the bench was Mr. Quinn, acting as professor in the new branch of school instruction. The pupils were the newly elected road overseers.

"Boone county is going to have better roads in the future," was Mr. Quinn's first announcement, "and if you men are to be responsible for the condition of these roads then you must know something about road building yourselves. That's why I have organized this class, and if you show yourselves apt pupils there should be no more complaint about the condition of the highways here."

Quinn believes that such a school is necessary if the county is to have good roads. Much of the time of the first session of the class was devoted to acquainting the overseers with the provisions of the road laws. "Promptness" was the keynote of his instructions.

"Ditch your roads right away," he said. "Remove everything from the roads and ditches in spite of what the landowners say; also make the landowners keep their hedges trimmed."

He made it plain to the overseers that they had authority and that he wanted them to make use of it. The men were interested too. Some of them had had trouble with the landowners, and they wanted to know what to do.

"Tell me how to make a single man work on the roads," one suggested.

"Make him do it; make him do it," Quinn replied. "It's like getting blood from a turnip, but make him do it."

"What would you do when you get your roads in good condition and all of your neighbors travel on it in preference to some other and cut it all to pieces?" was the question of another.

"How can you make the rich men do any work?" came from a third man.

Hundreds of similar questions were discussed by the overseers and Quinn, all with a view of solving the question of how to improve the country roads. There were instructions as to the use of teams and when to do the work.

Other sessions of the class in road building have been held since the first lesson.

APPLE BUYERS VISIT COUNTY

Yield of Luscious Fruit in Adams County Expected to be Almost Double that of Any Other Year. Prices likely to be Paid.

With the apple crop in Adams County far ahead of any previous year much interest centers in the sales of the various orchards anticipated within the next few days. Buyers are on hand and several of the orchards have already been sold. It is estimated that the fruit this year will bring about $2.25 per barrel the orchard owners to pick, pack and take the fruit to the stations for shipment.

C. J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, has just returned from a trip through the New York apple growing section and states that the yield there will be bountiful. The Western apple section reports the same condition while the Middle West will supply the Chicago market and as a result no buyers from the Illinois city are here this year. This general abundance of the fruit will naturally keep the prices lower than would otherwise have been the case, and the $2.25 price will be obtained for only the very choicest fruit, the apples not so perfect bringing about twenty five cents less per barrel

Even while the prices anticipated are not so high as at first hoped for, the revenue to the county this year will be enormous. This year's crop will be almost double the amount of any preceding year according to those who are thoroughly in touch with the fruit growing interests of the county. The large and handsome trees are bending to the ground with the beautiful fruit and the orchards will present a veritable fairyland to those paying them a visit.

Several of the orchards have been sold this week. A. D. Sheely has sold the crop from his orchards near Hilltown to Mr. Bahrenburg. It is said that the price paid was $2.00 f. o. b. A. I. Weidner, of Arendtsville, has sold his crop to Mr. Herman, who represents an Indianapolis firm. The crop was bought for a lump sum which has not been made public.

Other buyers in the field are C. J. Tyson, Flora Dale; D. N. Minnich, of Chambersburg; Phillips and Company, Norfolk, Virginia; and J. Barratt Conner, representing Charles H. Stewart, of Philadelphia.

VETERANS HOLD 45TH REUNION

Fiftieth Pennsylvania Infantry Association Holds its Reunion here. Business Meeting and Camp Fire. Officers Elected.

The forty fifth annual reunion of the 50th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry Association was held in Gettysburg on Thursday evening with fifty eight members of the association and the ladies' auxiliary in attendance. The battlefield trip was made during the day with John E. Pitzer as guide, the Pitzer House being the headquarters for the reunion. Among those in attendance were members from Ohio and Michigan.

The regiment did not take part in the battle of Gettysburg but was at that time engaged at Vicksburg. On July 4, 1865 they were at Gettysburg for the laying of the cornerstone of the soldiers' monument in the National Cemetery, being sent here to represent the infantry arm of the service.

The members of the association elected William Williams, of Ohio, president; John F. Phillips, of Philadelphia, vice president; J. M. Mishler, of Philadelphia, secretary; and Louis Crater, of Reading, chaplain.

Following the business meeting a camp fire was held at the Court House in which several local Grand Army men took part. Speeches were made by Chaplain Crater and Henry Anthony, of Philadelphia. A poem was read by Mrs. J. M. Mishler, president of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The majority of the veterans and their families left Friday for their homes.

FIRST NIGHT CELEBRATED

First Night of College Term Celebrated with Hazing and Usual Placarding of Town with Sophomore Posters.

The usual traditions of Gettysburg College regarding the opening night of the school year were observed Wednesday, starting about nine o'clock in the evening and continuing until daybreak next morning. Freshmen were put through numerous stunts and the customary posters, with no more than the customary evidences of intelligence contained thereon, were placed all over the town. The only thing lacking was the clash between the two lower classes which was prevented by action of the Student Council and the request of the college authorities.

A long line of Freshmen were marched during the evening to the light in the center of the campus and there made to mount the large mail box, one by one, where they were put through the task of barking at the moon, making speeches and doing other humiliating stunts. When these failed to amuse the large crowd which had gathered they were put up in pairs and finally a dozen of the new men were made to discard their shoes and run a race. When they got back they were hurried to the starting place where all the foot gear had been piled in a heap and, in the fight for possession, many got shoes they had never seen before.

One unlucky individual tried to escape the punishment and he was put through an unusually severe course. Rowing a boat on the grass was one of his principal performances while he was forced to swim out of the "creek" when the boat "upset."

The Sophomores had considerable difficulty getting up their posters for the police were watching for them practically all night in order to protect property. The boys did show more regard than usual and in only a few instances was the objectionable literature placed anywhere but on pavements and electric light and telephone poles.

The Freshmen made no attempt to molest them in their work and the majority of the posters are at the places where the second year men had placed them

CHESTNUTS PLENTIFUL

The largest chestnut crop, for many years, is expected this season, on the Blue Ridge mountains. All the chestnut trees at present are heavily loaded with large chestnut burrs, which indicate that chestnuts can be gotten in abundance, unless Jack Frost comes along, and does his part in destroying them.

Shellbark trees also promise a large yield after a failure of several years.

MORE THAN SKIN DEEP

More Than a Skin Salve Is Needed To Cure Piles Permanently.

Don't be disappointed if you fail to get a lasting cure of piles with salves. The cause of piles is more than skin deep. It is sluggish, flabby veins—pockets filled with thick, bad blood.

HEM-ROID, a tablet tonic remedy, is taken inwardly, acts on the circulation and cures all kinds of piles thoroughly.

To gain this effect, wear a Henderson Corset. We strongly endorse Henderson Corsets because they are individualized for all proportions of figures. They shape the figure by following the natural lines, and not by distorting or compressing. You will appear fasionable and be comfortable and hygienic if you wear a Henderson Corset.

Henderson Corsets retain their shapeliness until they are actually worn out. They are constructed to withstand severe strains and hard usage. We offer all of the latest styles of HENDERSON CORSETS for your selection at popular prices.
